Facts About Summer Learning

John Hopkins University, July 2005

- All young people experience learning losses when they do not engage in educational activities during the summer. Research shows that students typically score lower on standardized test at the end of summer vacation than they do on the same tests at the beginning of summer vacation.
- On average, students lose approximately 2.6 months of grade level equivalency in mathematics computation skills over the summer months. Studies reveal that the greatest areas of summer loss for all students, regardless of socio-economic status, are in factual or procedural knowledge.
- Studies show that out-of-school time is a dangerous time for unsupervised children and teens. Young people who are unsupervised during the out-of-school time are more likely to use alcohol, drugs, and tobacco; engage in criminal and other high-risk behaviors, receive poor grades, and drop out of school than those who have the opportunity to benefit from constructive activities supervised by responsible adults.
